In the Catholic Church, a religious institute is "a society in which members...pronounce public vows...and lead a life of brothers or sisters in common".. Consecrated life may be lived either individually or as a member of an institute. The Catholic Church recognises, as forms of individual consecrated life, that of a hermit and that of a consecrated virgin.

From a religious point of view, the solitary life is a form of asceticism, wherein the hermit renounces worldly concerns and pleasures. This can be done for many reasons, including: to come closer to the deity or deities they worship or revere, to devote one's energies to self-liberation from sa'fs'ra, etc. This practice appears also in Hinduism, Buddhism, and Sufism.
