Although some features of German grammar, such as the formation of some of the verb forms, resemble those of English, German grammar differs from that of English in that it has, among other things, cases and gender in nouns and a strict verb-second word order in main clauses. German has retained many of the grammatical distinctions that other Germanic languages have lost in whole or in part.

Hi Bob, The use of "ing forms was touched on in a previous question (see 'ing forms and post modification'), but it's worth returning to, not least because your question raises interesting issues relating to word class and syntactic function.. The notion of word class (also called part of speech) is a convenient one for labelling purposes but tends to buckle under pressure.
